Meteora hiking map.

After all you are saving $$$ on a private photo tour, isn't it?While I did a meticulous job, I can't guarantee that all of the pins are precisely placed, since they were positioned according to my memory, with no gps assistance.
Roussanou Monastery framed by vegetation
Monk on the private cable car
Some of the monasteries have a private cable car, used by monks and service personnel to skip the long run of stairs leading to the top.
Monastery of the Holy Trinity and Pindus mountain rangeTo take a zoomed picture of the monastery and the peak, it's better to climb a little bit higher, so that the perspective is slightly changing and including in the background Pindus mountain range. The numerical order of the photos is only for convenience and it doesn't show a route to follow.
Rousseau and Saint Nicholas monasteries
The second shot was zoomed on the monasteries of Rousseau and Saint Nicholas, that this time become predominant subjects of the picture. The point of view can be varied by taking the photo from the parking on top, from the lowest point of the stairs, or from in between them.
Relaxing with a view of Saint Stephan Monastery (Photo tour location: 1)
Relaxing in front of St. Stephen Monastery
In between Saint Stephen Monastery and the Holy Trinity Monastery, there is a big rock leaning toward the valley, that is easily accessible jumping the guard-rail of the main road.
From the same location at daylight it's possible to have a nice view of Saint Nicholas monastery. The stairs, carved into the rock to make it accessible to tourists, are clearly visible in the frame.
View of Roussanou and Varlaam Monasteries (Photo tour location: 2)
Roussanou and Varlaam Monasteries
To capture this photo you have to access the Monastery of the Holy Trinity (3€ entrance fee).
Hiking path to Adrachi (Photo tour location: 17)
Hiking path to Adrachi
Starting from Kastraki, there is an easy hiking path leading to a fallic rock formation standing lonely on top of the hill. The first time we reached this place I was speechless and I thought what was appearing in front of my eyes had to be Eden Valley.
The first picture selected, is a panorama obtained stitching together 10 different shots, and then resized to fit internet needs. You have no rights to post comments
Going a little bit further following the road toward Kalambaka and looking at the back side, a new interesting view of the stand and the pinnacles is waiting to be eternalized.
On the back of it, it's possible to frame a complex of small pinnacles and caves, bringing to the memory the valleys of Cappadocia; on the front side there is a view of Kastraki, and using a tele-lens, it's possible to capture several abandoned monasteries and constructions.
Best spot for contextualized portraits (Photo tour location: 8)
Oti mesmerized by the rocks in Meteora
Davide connecting with nature in Meteora
Rock formations in Meteora
If it wasn't because of the photo location number 7, this would have been the best spot of our photo tour. It is quite safe to walk also on the main road, since traffic is limited and slow.
I drew only one red route on the hiking map, that turned out to be quite adventurous and with some climbing involved, so we would advice against going there to inexperienced climbers.
This photo map is only qualitative, to understand the location of interesting viewpoints where to take photos, and it shouldn't be used to navigate the area. This photo was taken in spring, so it might look different in other seasons. Slightly changing the position and the focal length, can help to change the perspective and inspire different feelings, as understandable comparing the two shots in which me and Oti are the subjects.
Part of the success of the last shots is due to the peculiar light: while we can guarantee for the beauty of the place, unfortunately we cannot cater for the same dramatic light. That's why the best way to experience Meteora is by walking and hiking, so that new points of view are opening at each step.
This viewpoint is easy to find, standing on a big rock just next to the main road, protruding over the valley. The conditions of the routes should be checked in Meteora with the competent authorities or with a local guide.
While we feel that following the gray paths and using some common sense it's quite safe for any adult, we don't assume any responsibility, and you use this map at your own risk.
Hiking path leading to the Monastery of the Holy Trinity (Photo tour location: 3)
Hiking path leading to the Monastery of the Holy Trinity
This photo was taken from one of the front openings of the Monastery of the Holy Trinity (3€ entrance fee still apply), and it is picturing the winding walking path connecting the monastic community with the main road.
Best view of the Monastery of the Holy Trinity (Photo tour location: 6)
Monastery of the Holy Trinity in Meteora
This is the most famous view of Saint Stephen Monastery, and maybe of the whole Meteora.
Views of the Monastery of the Holy Trinity (Photo tour locations: 4-5)
Monastery of the Holy Trinity over its pinnacle
This image, picturing the Monastery of the Holy Trinity over its pinnacle, was taken from a big rock a few meters away from the walking path connecting the monastery with the main road. It is still easy to find, another big rocky peninsula along the main road, visible also on the right side of the previous panoramic shot.
The complex of rocks and pinnacles are seen from a different perspective, revealing the valleys in between them, that before were not visible.
Four of the six monasteries are visible in this photo, but they are not an essential part of this shot, focused on the natural beauties rather than the monasteries themselves.
St Nicholas Monastery
View of Varlaam and Roussanou Monasteries (Photo tour location: 10)
Varlaam Monastery
A little bit up the road there is a nice perspective of Varlaam Monastery, with a view of the whole monastic complex: the main building with its symmetrical construction, the courtyard, the church and the stairs embedded into the rock.
While I hope this article will be helpful to plan your own photo tour in Meteora with our hiking map, I still suggest to use it only as a starting point, leaving to your own inspiration what hiking paths to follow in Meteora, finding new and interesting point of views to take memorable photos.
From the same position was taken also the picture of Roussanou Monastery relating with the big pinnacle in front of it. This was just a limited report with a selected number of photos out of the several hundreds I took while visiting Meteora.
The trail leading to the rock is beautiful and passing through luxurious vegetation.
I'm giving this map for free, but if you feel like it was helpful for you, a small donation would be really welcome to reward my hard work, and allow me to keep it free also in the future.
Remember that going outside of the marked paths in Meteora might be dangerous, since there are steep cliffs and ravines with no safety measures. It's giving a similar point of view to the previous one, but with a slightly tilted angle.
The back courtyard is embedded in between several rocks that can be climbed to enjoy the beautiful views of the surroundings.

Meteora is an amazing place for photo addicted, where to take outstanding pictures even with little technical skills, since the place is providing most of the magic.
On our way back to the village, we decided to stop down the road in front of Varlaam Monastery, where there is a small resting area.
If you feel like you are already knowledgeable enough, then keep reading our photography article.
Sunset in Meteora
While travelling what I often do before going to a location, is to search for photos taken by other professional or amateur photographers, first to understand if I want to go to that place, and then to find interesting point of views, from where to take myself appealing photos.
While of pictures the internet is full, what is usually missing is where to go to have that particular perspective, and it's not always easy to guess the original location through the photo.
This article with free map included, is meant to answer to both of those needs, giving a general overview of the area through a photo album of Meteora with selected pictures, and at the same time placing the photos on a map so that it's possible to reproduce a similar shot.
If the valley and the incredible rock formations were not enough, the shadows overcast by the strong sun and contrasting with the luxurious green of the vegetation, makes the shot more dramatic.
The one in Great Meteoron looked really active, with people coming and going quite frequently, being the ideal spot to shot the cable car in action.
It's a good shot to make people wonder how the monks managed to reach the peak when there were no stairs.

Abandoned monasteries and pinnacles (Photo tour locations: 14-15)
Pinnacles and caves in Meteora
In the outskirts of Kastraki, there is a huge smooth rock quite easy to climb, that is offering interesting views in many directions. This article is focusing on outdoor locations, since a separate post will be published about the monasteries in Meteora.
This location is exactly in between several peaks, so it can give a unique perspective of the steep cliffs.
We actually reached this spot from the other side, coming from Kalambaka and following a dry riverbed, but we can't suggest the same route, since we had to climb several steep falls on the way, that made the hike harder than we expected.
Roussanou Monasteries in front of a pinnacle

On the way to Varlaam Monastery after the curve on the main road, there is a view of Roussanou Monastery seen contextualized in the green rocky valley.
Enjoying sunset in Meteora (Photo tour location: 9)
Perfect location for the sunset in Meteora
This was more of a lucky surprise than a planned stop to enjoy the sunset.
You can create your own photo tour, possibly distributed along more days, and we strongly suggest to use this map and article only as a starting point, and not to limit your hiking and photo exploration to what we experienced ourselves.
Best viewpoint of the whole Meteora (Photo tour location: 7)
The location number 7 of our hiking map, is my personal favourite.
There are plenty of information with sections dedicated to the monasteries, practicalities, history and nature.
This location is also a very good choice to enjoy the sunset.
It doesn't want to be a complete map with all of the hiking paths available, (for that, try to have a look at this external map) just a report of our days exploring Meteora and hiking around.
At the very end of this rock formation, there is a big stone that looks like a stage, and makes this location the best place to take suggestive contextualized portraits.
Rock formations in Adrachi (Photo tour location: 18)
Rock formations in Adrachi
At the end of the hiking path leading to the top, leaving the phallic rock to the back, the view is opening on the other side of the valley toward Kalambaka.
We returned here several times during our stay, and in particular the last morning we stayed here many hours just enjoying the view and engraving it in our memories.
It was so sad staying at this location and seeing tour buses just passing by, going from one monastery to the other without stopping, and losing most of the beauty of Meteora and its natural landscape.
Before starting your free and independent photo tour following our suggestions and map, and start hiking in Meteora, we suggest you to first read our article visit to Meteora in Greece.
From this location it's possible to show the steepness and height of the pinnacle, with the monastery that looks almost inaccessible on top.
Roussanou and Varlaam Monastery from this particular perspective are almost aligned, even if at different heights, balancing the frame and the composition.
If you can't see the exact same location of the selected shot, just look around and in a maximum range of a few meters, you should be able to take a similar photo.
On the map I drew also the routes that we followed while hiking in Meteora, only the trails that we explored ourselves.
Paved roads for cars and hiking paths are easily recognizable by the different sizes and colours on our map.
We had lunch in this spot waiting for the monastery to open after lunch break, enjoying the view of the Monastery, with the village of Kalambaka just below.
Even if this meant to walk back with the darkness, it was well worth the inconvenience.
Abandoned monastery Pinnacles over Kastraki (Photo tour location: 16)
Pinnacles over Kastraki
On the other side of Kastraki, there is another smooth rock with a recreational outdoor stand for villagers and visitors.

Take a holiday in Greece to explore ancient Greek monuments in Athens and Byzantine relics in Greece's second city, Thessaloniki. In the north, visit the Meteora region's remote medieval monasteries. Sun-soaked sands and sleepy villages or vibrant resorts await on the Greek islands of Rhodes and Kos.
